Illinois Professors Hunt Cause Students' Naps During Lectures.

URBANA, III., Feb. 20.-An alibi or students who sleep in lectures and for instructors accused of being ores may be provided by University

"What makes people go to sleep in lectures?" is a question that may be answered soon. The scientists have captured air in bottles from various seemblies and every bottle has been carefully scaled, so that the invisible sleep microbe will not escape.

Investigators say that late bours and dry lectures are not wholly to biame for the sleeping of students. Too little carbon dioxide or the preonce of an undiscovered gas may be the cause. The investigators wish to see if they cannot make everybody stay awake in lectures by improving the air. Also, they believe, there will be fewer colds and better general
